TURF TYPE TALL FESCUE

Self-Repairing Tall Fescue

4th Millennium SRP is the latest generation of the Millennium tall fescue variety. This advanced turfgrass is distinguished by its Self-Repairing Potential (SRP), a feature made possible by its rhizomes. These underground stems help the grass establish itself faster, tolerate heavy traffic better, and recover from damage more quickly.

It's also a highly adaptable turfgrass, making it a leading choice for a variety of uses, including athletic fields, parks, home lawns, and sod production.

Key Features and Benefits

- Self-Repair: The rhizomes in 4th Millennium SRP allow it to repair itself from wear and divots, ensuring a consistently full and healthy lawn.
- Disease Resistance: This variety is specially bred to resist Brown Patch, a disease that can often harm other tall fescue types.
- High Quality and Durability: In NTEP trials, 4th Millennium SRP was rated highest for turfgrass quality in both the "LPI Group 1" and "Transition Region" categories. It also performed exceptionally well in trials measuring "Percent Turfgrass Fullness of Canopy" under both traffic and no-traffic conditions.
- Adaptable: With a dark color and fine leaf texture, it mixes well with Kentucky bluegrass and thrives in a wide range of growing conditions.
- Tolerant: It is both shade and drought-tolerant, offering water savings and flexibility for different environments.
